

Top 3 Critical Illnesses Your Insurance Can Cover

Posted July 15, 2025

Critical illnesses are no longer a financial burden when you have adequate insurance. Protect yourself and family by getting coverage for health insurance you need before the crisis occurs.

Did you know that non-communicable diseases are the leading cause of death in the Caribbean?

Illness is not affecting us in the 60s and 70s anymore, we are facing the biggest crises in the prime of our lives.

But we can safeguard our health by investing in health coverage that can alleviate the pressures of critical illness. One diagnosis can change everything. Mortgage payments, bills and hospitals will not go away because we want it to when a health problem occurs.

The leading cause of death in the Caribbean is linked to critical illnesses like stroke, heart disease and cancer (World Bank). These conditions are often linked to lifestyle choices, and it is evident by the high rates of obesity, high fat diets and tobacco use (World Bank).

Critical illness coverage insurance is created to cover serious health conditions with one-time lump sum payment.

The policy does not have any complex reimbursement frameworks. The funds can be used for treatment, long-term care and other financial obligations (outstanding bills, mortgage, transportation, travel etc.). It can help you plan for costly ongoing medical treatments, acquire assisting devices or home modifications. In this article, we look at some of the major critical illnesses affecting our Caribbean population: Cardiovascular diseases, cancer and neurological conditions.
